So, you're looking to work for a flourishing, forward thinking business that rewards and recognises success. One that can confidently say its products and services are industry leading, as are the people that make it tick.

You've a hunger for developing new business and understand how patience and persistence, mirrored with confidence and hard work, delivers results. Speaking of results, you thrive on exceeding targets and are motivated by being able to drive your own earning potential.

You have a flair for leaning new products and are excited by technology. Having systems that adequately support you in wowing your customers is important, as is a structure that enables you to deliver on your promises.

You're definitely not shy, picking up the phone and selling yourself comes naturally; more so when you know that the products and services on offer will support the excellent customer service you're promising. After all, what company doesn't need an industry expert on tap to deal with all of its communication needs?

We're already successful, we have been for 16 years, but we want more; not only do you understand this, you want to be a part of the challenges and opportunities that we, and 2019, have to offer. You expect an attractive salary with great commission, fabulous incentives like worldwide trips and big nights out; you like to spend time away from work so holidays are important, as are things like private healthcare and pension schemes. That's fine by us!
